Berlin in times of Corona: Travel Updates 18th February 2022

Admittedly, every trip to the city needs a bit of planning: The Corona pandemic is not over yet. Most indoor areas are currently only open to vaccinated and recovered persons over the age of 18.

The mask is still compulsory.

The 3G rule applies in local transport and on platforms: passengers must be vaccinated, recovered or tested. Proof can be printed out or shown in digital form. In addition, people have to wear an FFP2 mask on buses, S-Bahn and U-Bahn trains in Berlin. Failure to comply with the mask requirement or 3G rule will result in a fine.

Please inform yourself about the current measures.

Hermannplatz (Berlin U-Bahn)

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Hermannplatz is a station in the Neukölln district of Berlin which serves as an interchange between the lines U7 and U8. Operated by the BVG, it is one of the busiest stations on the Berlin U-Bahn system.

History [edit]

Platform of the U7

Platform of the U8

Hermannplatz station first opened on 11 April 1926 together with the rest of the newly built line between the stations Hasenheide and Bergstraße, which are today the U7 stations Südsterm and Karl-Marx-Straße respectively. The second platform, built above the original, was opened on 17 July 1927 to serve what is now the U8 line. The station's architects were Alfred Grenander and Alfred Fehse. The station was the first on the Berlin network to be fitted with escalators, which connected the two platforms.

Until 1930, tram lines were present on all the streets converging on Hermannplatz, and it was served by no fewer than 15 separate routes. In the following years, however, there was a gradual reduction in tram provision in the former West Berlin, and the last tram ran to Hermannplatz on 1 October 1964.

Today, the square is a hub of activity in one of the most densely populated areas of Berlin. It has therefore retained its status as a transport hub, and is served by five bus lines during the day (two of which operate continuously) and four lines at night. On U7 the next station is Rathaus Neukölln or Südsterm. On U8 the next station is Schönleinstraße or Boddinstraße.

Shuttle / Public Transport :

There will be no bus shuttle between the Bowling centers, because the very busy traffic in Berlin would cause a lot of delays in the schedule. Both Bowling centers are in a very short walking distance to the next U-Bahn (Metro/ Underground)/ Bus. It will take you 45 minutes, to travel from one center to the other.

Buying & Validating Tickets

Buying Tickets:

Tickets can be purchased at multilingual ticket machines on the platforms of S-and U-Bahn stations. In buses, fares are paid to the bus driver, in trams at machines inside the trains. In larger stations the S-Bahn and BVG provide ticket counters. Tickets can also be purchased via the free app of the Berliner Verkehrsbetriebe. The BVG credit card has been available since October 2021. With credit that can be loaded onto the card, passengers can pay on buses and at the customer centres.

Timetables

On weekdays most U-Bahn lines run from 4 a.m. till 1 a.m. In between, the bus night lines provide public transport. During the day the U-Bahn travels in 5-minute intervals, at night in 10-minute intervals. On the weekend the U-Bahn runs 24 hours, in the daytime mainly in ten-minute intervals, during the night in 15-minute intervals.

Hotels :

We recommend to look for hotels in the vicinity of the Bowling Centers. If you book on your own, please make sure to stay in walking distance of the U-Bahn.
